PRESENTS A FREE ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Tamira K. Brennan, PhD, RPA

Section Head, Curation, Illinois State Archaeological Survey

Kincaid Mounds:

A Major Mississippian Center on the Lower Ohio River

The Kincaid site, in southernmost Illinois, was occupied by Native Americans from about 1100 to 1450 CE. Though its location in remote, rural Illinois made it less well known than Cahokia or Moundville, it was one of the largest Mississippian mound centers ever built, and was important to the region during the pre-contact era. It also played a major role in the history of North American archaeology, serving as a training ground for the University of Chicago's prestigious archaeological field program. This talk discusses the history of Kincaid from both the recent and distant past, noting its role in a network of interconnected sites that spanned the southeastern part of our continent.
