Chicagoland Archaeology

Prehistoric and Historic Sites

For many decades attempts were made to suppress memory of the prehistoric and historic importance of Native Americans in Chicagoland. Dan Melone will discuss his work with archives and families of descendants to identify sites and restore recognition.

For over twenty years Dan Melone has conducted archaeological research, surveying hundreds of sites and compiling a large database of sites in Chicagoland. He also works with Menominee and Potawatomie descendants of Chief Alexander Robinson on their history and family cemetery.
