

ILLINOIS: AT THE HEART OF ANTHROPOLOGICAL ARCHAEOLOGY

A Presentation by Dale F. Simpson, Jr., Ph.D.

Illinois State Archaeological Survey and College of DuPage

Sponsored by the South Suburban Archaeological Society, a 501(c)3 not-for-profit organization; labor donated

The Koster Site – 9000 Years of Living on the Land

All Illinois has a deep archaeological record, rich in quantity and quality over time. As a result, a large variety of universities, institutes, laboratories, associations, and societies have been attracted to the state for research and related activities. It's no surprise, then, that many of the major developments in anthropological archaeology, both in theory and method, emerged from the Land of Lincoln. This presentation will emphasize the major points that make Illinois so attractive for archaeology and showcase the value in teaching about Illinois' past, in the present, for the future.
