Thursday, March 24-7:30 PM via ZOOM "Chicagoland Archaeology: Prehistoric & Historic Sites" with Dan Melone, MA

Join Great Lakes archaeologist Dan Melone as he discusses the Native people of pre-settlement Chicago and presents his prehistoric and historic findings from throughout the Chicagoland region.

For over twenty years, Dan Melone (MA, University of Leicester), has been conducting archaeological research within the Chicagoland area and Kenya. He has surveyed hundreds of sites and compiled a large database, recording prehistoric/historic Indigenous and historic sites within the city and surrounding suburbs. He also works with Menominee and Potawatomie descendants of Chief Alexander Robinson on the history of the Chief, his family and cemetery. Dan's research in Kenya, where he owns a coffee farm, focuses on prehistoric site surveys and ethnographic studies.

PLEASE NOTE: Mr. Melone will not be appearing in person at the Irwin Center but will be presenting via Zoom. Please join us in our usual meeting room at the Center, where we will gather to view Dan's broadcast, and where light refreshments will be available before the program! For those who wish to view this presentation remotely via Zoom, see our insert page.

IN THE NEWS-5,000-year-old Chalk Drum

The British Museum is calling the chalk drum, pictured below alongside a chalk ball and bone pin, "the most important piece of prehistoric art to be found in Britain in the last 100 years."

The chalk sculpture, sometimes referred to as a drum — though it is really just one solid carved piece of stone — was found in a burial site many miles north of Stonehenge, on what today is a country estate near the village of Burton Agnes in East Yorkshire.

Mark Allen, founder of Allen Archaeology, who discovered the drum, told The Washington Post that based on geological imaging, his team had suspected they were standing atop a circular burial mound (barrow) dug into the chalk. Within the burial site were the remains of three children, aged 3 to 12. The youngest two faced one another, nose to nose, their hands appearing to clasp. The eldest child was placed with his or her arms around them. Allen said it appeared that the three died at the same time, though more analysis is forthcoming. Using radiocarbon tracings, the archaeologists have dated the grave to the approximate time of the construction of Stonehenge, between 3005 and 2890 B.C.

The newly discovered drum will be on public display for the first time as part of the British Museum's "The World of Stonehenge" exhibition, which opened in February.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Lost Cities, Ancient Tombs: 100 Discoveries that Changed the World

National Geographic Publications-2021 Ann Williams, Editor Douglas Preston, Foreword

"Archaeology is the key that unlocks our deepest history. Ruined cities, golden treasures, cryptic inscriptions, and ornate tombs have been found across the world, yet these artifacts of ages past often raised more questions than answers. With the emergence of archaeology as a scientific discipline in the 19th century, everything changed.

Illustrated with dazzling photographs, this enlightening narrative tells the story of human civilization through 100 key expeditions, spanning six continents and more than three million years of history. Each account relies on firsthand reports from explorers, antiquarians, and scientists as they crack secret codes, evade looters and political suppression, fall in love, commit a litany of blunders, and uncover ancient curses."
